

LAS

2. Wanton; soft; luxurious.
Grim visaged war hath sooth'd his wrinkl'd front;
And now, instead of mounting barbed steeds,
To fright the souls of fearful adversaries,
He capers nimbly in a lady's chamber,
To the lascivious pleasing of a lute. Shakep. Rich. III.
LASCIVIOUSNESS. n. f. [from lascivious.] Wantonness; looseness.
The reason pretended by Augustus was the lasciviousness of his elegies, and his art of love. Dryd. Preface to Ovid.
LASCIVIOUSLY. adv. [from lascivious.] Leudly; wantonly; loosely.
LASH. n. f. [The most probable etymology of this word seems to be that of Skinner, from schlagen, Dutch, to strike; whence slash and lash.]
1. A stroke with any thing pliant and tough.
From hence are heard the groans of ghosts, the pains
Of sounding lashes, and of dragging chains. Dryden's Æn.
Rous'd by the lash of his own stubborn tail,
Our lion now will foreign foes assail. Dryden.
2. The thong or point of the whip which gives the cut or blow.
Her whip of crickets bone, her lash of film,
Her waggoner a small grey-coated gnat. Shakepeare.
I observed that your whip wanted a lash to it. Addis. Spect.
3. A lash, or string in which an animal is held; a snare: out of use.
The farmer they leave in the lash,
With losses on every side. Tusser's Husbandry.
4. A stroke of satire; a sarcasm.
The moral is a lash at the vanity of arrogating that to ourselves which succeeds well. L'Estrange.
To LASH. v. a. [from the noun.]
1. To strike with any thing pliant; to scourge.
Lucanus to lash his horses bends,
Prone to the wheels. Dryden.
Lets whip these stragglers o'er the seas again,
Lash hence these over-weening rags of France. Shakep.
Let men out of their way lash on ever to fast, they are not at all the nearer their journey's end. South's Sermon.
He charg'd the flames, and those that disobey'd
He lash'd to duty with his sword of light. Dryden.
And limping death, lash'd on by fate,
Comes up to shorten half our date. Dryden's Horace.
We lash the pupil, and defraud the ward. Dryden's Pers.
Leaning on his lance he mounts his car,
His fiery couriers lashing through the air. Garth's Ovid.
2. To move with a sudden spring or jerk.
The club hung round his ears, and batter'd brows;
He falls; and lashing up his heels, his rider throws. Dryd.
3. To beat; to strike with a sharp sound.
The winds grow high,
Impending tempests charge the sky;
The lightning flies, the thunder roars,
And big waves lash the frightened shoars. Prior.
4. To scourge with satire.
Could pension'd Boileau lash in honest strain,
Flat'ers and bigots ev'n in Louis' reign. Pope's Horace.
5. To tie any thing down to the side or mast of a ship.
To LASH. v. n. To ply the whip.
They lash aloud, each other they provoke,
And lend their little souls at every stroke. Dryden's Æn.
Gentle or sharp, according to thy choice,
To laugh at follies, or to lash at vice. Dryden's Persus.
Wheels clash with wheels, and bar the narrow street;
The lashing whip rebounds. Gay's Trivia.
LASH. n. f. [from lash.] One that whips or lashes.
LASS. n. f. [from lad is formed laddess, by contraction lass.
Hickes.] A girl; a maid; a young woman: used now only of mean girls.
Now was the time for vigorous lads to show
What love or honour could invite them to;
A goodly theatre, where rocks are round
With reverend age, and lovely lasses crown'd. Waller.
A girl was worth forty of our widows; and an honest,
downright, plain-dealing lass it was. L'Estrange.
They sometimes an hafty kiss
Steal from unwary lasses; they with scorn,
And neck reclin'd, relent. Philips.
LASSITUDE. n. f. [from lassitude, Latin; lassitude, French.] Weariness; fatigue.
Lassitude is remedied by bathing, or anointing with oil and warm water; for all lassitude is a kind of contusion and compression of the parts; and bathing and anointing give a relaxation or emolliation. Bacon's Natural History.
Assiduity in cogitation is more than our embodied souls can bear without lassitude or distemper. Glanville, Sep. 14.
She lives and breeds in the air; for the largeness and lightness of her wings and tail sustain her without lassitude. More's Antidote against Atheism.
Do not over-fatigue the spirits, lest the mind be seized

LAS

- with a lassitude, and thereby be tempted to nauseate, and grow tired. Watts's Improvement of the Mind.
From mouth and nose the briny torrent ran,
And lost in lassitude lay all the man. Pope's Odyssey.
Lassitude generally expresses that weariness which proceeds from a distempered state; and not from exercise, which wants no remedy but rest: it proceeds from an increase of bulk, from a diminution of proper evacuation; or from too great a consumption of the fluid necessary to maintain the spring of the solids, as in fevers; or from a vitiated secretion of that juice, whereby the fibres are not supplied. Quincy.
LASSLORN. n. f. [from lass and lorn.] Forsaken by his mistress.
Brown groves,
Whose shadow the dismissed batchelor loves,
Being lasslorn. Shakepeare's Tempest.
LAST. n. f. [from last, Saxon; laeste, Dutch.]
1. Last; that which follows all the rest in time.
I feel my end approach, and thus embrace'd,
Am pleas'd to die; but hear me speak my last. Dryden.
Here, last of Britons, let your names be read;
Are none, none living? let me praise the dead. Pope.
Wit not alone has shone on ages past,
But lights the present, and shall warm the last. Pope.
2. Hindmost; which follows in order of place.
3. Beyond which there is no more.
Unhappy slave, and pupil to a bell,
Unhappy to the last the kind releasing knell. Cowley.
The swans, that on Cayster often try'd
Their tuneful songs, now sung their last, and dy'd. Addis.
O! may fam'd Brunswick be the last,
The last, the happiest British king,
Whom thou shalt paint, or I shall sing. Addison.
But, while I take my last adieu,
Heave thou no sigh, nor shed a tear.
4. Next before the present, as last week.
5. Utmost.
Fools ambitiously contend
For wit and power; their last endeavours bend
To outshine each other. Dryden's Lucretius.
6. At LAST. In conclusion; at the end.
Gad, a troop shall overcome him: but he shall overcome at the last. Gen. xlix. 19.
Thus weather-cocks, that for a while
Have turn'd about with every blast,
Grown old, and destitute of oil,
Rust to a point, and fix at last. Freind.
7. The LAST; the end.
All politicians chew on wisdom past,
And blunder on in business to the last. Pope.
LAST. adv.
1. The last time; the time next before the present.
How long is't now since last yourself and I
Were in a mask. Shakepeare's Romeo and Juliet.
When last I dy'd, and, dear! I die
As often as from thee I go,
I can remember yet that I
Something did say, and something did bestow. Donne.
2. In conclusion.
Pleas'd with his idol, he commends, admires,
Adores; and last, the thing ador'd desires. Dryden.
To LAST. v. n. [from last, Saxon.] To endure; to continue; to persevere.
All more lasting than beautiful. Sidney.
I thought it agreeable to my affection to your grace, to prefix your name before the essays: for the Latin volume of them, being in the universal language, may last as long as books last. Bacon's Essays.
With several degrees of lasting, ideas are imprinted on the memory.
These are standing marks of facts delivered by those who were eye-witnesses to them, and which were contrived with great wisdom to last till time should be no more. Addison.
LAST. n. f. [from last, Saxon.]
1. The mould on which shoes are formed.
The cobbler is not to go beyond his last. L'Estrange's Fab.
A cobbler produced several new grins, having been used to cut faces over his last. Addison's Spectator, N° 174.
Should the big last extend the shoe too wide,
Each stone would wrench th' unwary step aside. Gay.
2. [LAST, German.] A load; a certain weight or measure.
LASTERY. n. f. A red colour.
The bathful blood her snowy cheeks did spread,
That her became as polish'd ivory,
Which cunning craftsman's hand hath overlaid,
With fair vermilion, or pure lastery. Spens. Fairy Queen.

2. Of long continuance; perpetual.
White parents may have black children, as negroes sometimes have lasting white ones. Boyle on Colours.
The grateful work is done,
The seeds of discord sow'd, the war begun:
Frauds, fears and fury, have possess'd the state;
And fix'd the causes of a lasting hate. Dryden's Æn.
A sinew crack'd seldom recovers its former strength, and the memory of it leaves a lasting caution in the man, not to put the past quickly again to any robust employment. Locke.
LASTINGLY. adv. [from lasting.] Perpetually.
LASTINGNESS. n. f. [from lasting.] Durableness; continuance.
All more lasting than beautiful, but that the consideration of the exceeding lastingness made the eye believe it was exceeding beautiful. Sidney.
Consider the lastingness of the motions excited in the bottom of the eye by light. Newton's Opticks.
LAT. adv. [from last.]
1. In the last place.
I will justify the quarrel; secondly, balance the forces; and, lastly, propound variety of designs for choice, but not advise the choice. Bacon's War with Spain.
2. In the conclusion; at last.
LATCH. n. f. [from last, Dutch; laccio, Italian.] A catch of a door moved by a string, or a handle.
The latch mov'd up. Gay's Pastorals.
Then comes rosy health from her cottage of thatch,
Where never physician had lifted the latch. Smart.
To LATCH. v. a. [from the noun.]
1. To fasten with a latch.
He had strength to reach his father's house: the door was only latched; and, when he had the latch in his hand, he turned about his head to see his pursuer. Locke.
2. To fasten; to close, perhaps in this place: unless it rather signifies to catch from latch.
But hast thou yet latch'd the Athenian's eyes
With the love juice, as I did bid thee do? Shakep.
LAT. n. f.
Latches or laskets, in a ship, are small lines like loops, fastened by sewing into the bonnets and drablers of a ship, in order to lace the bonnets to the courses, or the drablers to the bonnets. Harris.
LAT. n. f. [from last, Fr.] The string that fastens the shoe.
There cometh one mightier than I, the latch of whole shoes I am not worthy to unlatch. Mark i. 7.
LATE. adj. [from last, Saxon; late, Dutch.]
1. Contrary to early; slow; tardy; long delayed.
My halting days lie on with full career,
Put my late spring no bud nor blossom sheweth. Milton.
Just was the vengeance, and to late days
Shall long posterity rebound thy praise. Pope's Odyssey.
2. Last in any place, office, or character.
All the difference between the late servants, and those who staid in the family, was, that those latter were finer gentlemen. Addison's Spectator, N° 107.
3. The deceased; as the works of the late Mr. Pope.
4. Far in the day or night.
5. After long delays; after a long time.
O boy! thy father gave thee life too soon,
And hath bereft thee of thy life too late. Shakep. H. VI.
Second Silvius after these appears,
Silvius Æneas, for thy name he bears;
For arms and justice equally renown'd,
Who late restor'd in Alba shall be crown'd. Dryd. Æn.
He laughs at all the giddy turns of state,
When mortals search too soon, and fear too late. Dryden.
The late it is before any one comes to have these ideas, the late also will it be before he comes to those maxims. Locke.
I might have spar'd his life,
But now it is too late. Philips's Distress Mother.
